MAX Goes to the Movies (Virtually) Saturday, June 27th, 7:00 – 8:30 p.m.

Before COVID-19, MAX SF was going to the movies monthly. Now that we are on lockdown, we've decided to try going to the movies using Netflix. For this activity, you need a Netflix streaming account. Members are invited to watch the show on their own, using their Netflix account, then join us for a discussion about the show, using Zoom, on Saturday, June 27 at 7 p.m.

In order to join the discussion, you must register for the Zoom discussion on the MAX SF website – the Zoom discussion is free! All those who register will receive instructions by email on the day of the discussion, with the link and password to join the Zoom conversation. Due to technical limitations we are unable to watch the show together. As a result, you need to watch at least part of the show on your own before the Zoom discussion.

June is Pride Month in San Francisco, so we've decided to watch the hit new mini-series "Hollywood" on Netflix that deals with the LGBTQ community in a story about aspiring actors and filmmakers in the post World War II "Golden Age" of Hollywood (1947-1952).

actors and filmmakers in the post-World War II Golden Age of Hollywood (1947-48) as they try to make it in the film industry – at almost any cost. Part of the series centers on a gas station that gives more service than just fill up of a car's gas tank! If customers mention a secret code word, a hunky gas station attendant hops in the car – with the customer – and then off they go to ... well, you get the picture! The idea of a gas station turned brothel might seem absurd – but it evidently is based on historical facts according to a 2012 memoir, Full Service: My Adventures in Hollywood and the Secret Sex Lives of the Stars, written by Scotty Bowers (with Lionel Friedberg).

Here's a link to the trailer to whet your appetite: <https://bit.ly/HollywoodPreview>.

The mini-series has seven episodes, each about 50 minutes long. To be a part of the Zoom discussion, watch just one of the episodes, or all of them in advance— it's up to you! We'll share opinions and experiences, including whether we liked the show or not. Everyone is welcome! Come, join the fun with your event coordinator, Bruce Cecil!
